Prometheus Unbound in the Public Schools: Teachers with the Cowan “Spirit of Liberal Learning”

During a time in education where neoliberal practices reign supreme in public schools, the MacMillan Institute, with its curriculum in the humanities and its teachers' commitment, created classroom environments where learning was integrated, internal, and shared communally. This vastly breaks with the efficient, competitive, mastery-driven practices of neoliberalism, and at the heart of this work, standing in the trenches are the teachers—always the teachers.
