

My name is Erin Steamer and I am a native Houstonian and proud product of the Houston Independent School District by way of the High School of Performing and Visual Arts. I earned my BBA in International Business with a minor in Economics from the University of Houston as well as an MPA in Public Affairs from Texas Southern University.

My goal is to guide students through the most challenging times of their lives and increase student achievement academically and socially while empowering teachers to become advocates for their students. Over the past 15 years, I have been blessed to teach students from K- 12 along with working 2 years as an adjunct professor at Houston Community College.

I love to travel, play blackjack and roulette specifically in New Orleans which is my home away from home and I pride myself on helping everybody succeed in life! My motto is: "If I got it, you got it!" A few fun facts about me is that I play the violin, took 3 years of Japanese in college and most importantly, this December will make 10 years that I have been married to my best friend and we have the best little blended family a girl could ever ask for with 2 grandbabies on the way. 😊
