SUBJECT: TITLE I, PART A PARENT INVOLVEMENT REPORT 2009–2010

Attached is the Title I, Part A Parent Involvement Report 2009–2010. This report reflects an assessment of the level of parental involvement coded in Chancery in relation to the feedback gathered on the 2009–2010 Parent Involvement Survey. The percentage of the responses received from the survey and the percentages of parental involvement in Chancery were included for each campus. The household demographic data were noted where available. Finally, this report provided a school office and district-level summation of student participation and feedback in Chancery and on the 2009–2010 survey.

Some of the highlights are as follows:

- Hispanic students (122,229) represented the largest number of Title I students districtwide. They had a 62.2 percent parent involvement participation rate in Chancery.
- The Title I Parent Involvement Survey was completed by 15,520 parents reflecting 8.1 percent of Title I students enrolled.
- Districtwide, 60.6 percent of parents were identified in Chancery as having received a copy of the parent involvement policy or parent/school compact. A review of the Chancery categories showed 40.2 percent of parents participated in parent conferences and 11.8 percent participated in activities coded as “education.” The family literacy participation rate was 10.2 percent and the parent literacy participation rate was 7.0 percent. The rate of parent participation in planning activities districtwide was 8.7 percent, while volunteerism was recorded at a rate of 10.6 percent.
- Schools appeared to be diligent in establishing the compact between them and the students’ parents. Districtwide, over 80 percent of parents responding to the survey reported that they “Strongly Agree” or “Agree” to Question 2: “The school has provided me a copy of the parent involvement policy” (86.0 percent) and Question 3: “The school provided me a copy of the parent/school compact” (82.7 percent).

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY

TITLE I, PART A PARENT INVOLVEMENT 2009–2010

Program Description

The Title I, Part A program is designed to ensure that all children have a fair, equal, and significant opportunity to obtain a high-quality education and reach, at a minimum, proficiency on challenging state academic achievement standards and state academic assessments. The Title I, Part A program (Part A-Improving Basic Programs Operated By Local Educational Agencies) was authorized by the ESEA and reauthorized by the NCLB Act of 2001.

Under this act, provisions to engage parents in the education process were made. The program's goal is to increase the presence of parents involved by providing funding and opportunities for parents of Title I, Part A students on either a schoolwide or targeted assistance campus. These provisions stress shared accountability between schools and parents for high student achievement. They include: expanded public school choice, a broader range of supplemental educational services for eligible children in low-performing schools, local development of parental involvement plans with sufficient flexibility to address local needs, and building parents' capacity for using effective practices to improve their own children's academic achievement (U.S. Department of Education, 2004). The program affords parents the opportunity to be informed at all levels of implementation.

According to the Title I, Part A Parent Involvement Guide (Department of External Funding, 2009c), parents must be involved in the decisions associated with impacting their children's academic success. For the purpose of identifying how parents were involved, the district identified the following eight areas by which parent involvement would be classified: individual compact, schoolwide compact, conference, education/training, family literacy, parent literacy, planning, and volunteering. The 2009–2010 Title I coding procedures for Chancery provides a description of each of these types (Department of External Funding, 2009a).

Federal Criteria for Identifying Title I, Part A Campuses

Title I, Part A regulations require that one percent of the total school Title I allocation be set aside for parental involvement activities. Schools are required to provide parents with a written parental involvement policy, which must be included in the district's plans. Additionally, schools must collaborate with parents in an effort to build capacity while also integrating other state and federally funded educational programs, conducting annual evaluations, and designing new strategies that impact parents and students (Department of External Funding, 2009b).

Purpose of the Evaluation Report

The purpose this report was to assess the level of parental involvement coded in Chancery in relation to the feedback gathered on the 2009–2010 Parent Involvement Survey. The percentage of the responses received from the survey and the percentages of parental involvement recorded in Chancery were included for each campus. The household demographic data were noted where available. Finally, this report provided school office and district-level summations of student participation in Chancery and responses from the 2009–2010 survey.

Key Findings

1. What were the demographic characteristics of students whose parents were coded in Chancery and parents who responded to the Title I Parent Involvement Survey?
 - Hispanic students (122,229) represented the largest number of Title I students districtwide. They had a 62.2 percent parent involvement participation rate in Chancery.

- White students had the third largest enrollment of Title I students (11,815), and the second highest parent involvement participation rate of 72.5 percent coded in Chancery, with Asian students having a 72.7 percent participation rate.
 - The Title I Parent Involvement Survey was completed by 15,520 parents reflecting 8.1 percent of Title I students enrolled.
 - For the 2009–2010 school year, the largest ethnic group responding to the Parent Involvement Survey was Hispanic (9,478) representing 61.1 percent of the 15,520 surveys returned. Seventy-six percent of all respondents were women. By gender, the category of Hispanic women was the highest percentage of persons responding (80.6 percent).
 - African American respondents represented the highest percentage (86.4 percent) of households who spoke English, while Hispanic respondents had the highest percentage (68.7 percent) indicating that English was not spoken at home.
2. How did the parent involvement information in Chancery compare to the parents' perceptions as expressed on the 2009–2010 Title I Parent Involvement Survey?
- Districtwide, 60.6 percent of parents were identified in Chancery as having received a copy of the parent involvement policy or parent/school compact. A review of the Chancery categories showed 40.2 percent of parents participated in parent conferences and 11.8 percent participated in activities coded as “education.” The family literacy participation rate was 10.2 percent and the parent literacy participation rate was 7.0 percent. The rate of parent participation in planning activities districtwide was 8.7 percent, while volunteerism was recorded at a rate of 10.6 percent.
 - Schools appeared to be diligent in establishing the compact between them and the students' parents. Districtwide, over 80 percent of parents surveyed responded “Strongly Agree” or “Agree” to Question 2 “The school has provided me a copy of the parent involvement policy” (86.0 percent) and Question 3: “The school provided me a copy of the parent/school compact” (82.7 percent).
 - Survey responses reported much higher participation rates in all activities compared to data actually coded in Chancery.

Recommendations

According to the Title I, Part A Parent Involvement components, schools must provide opportunities for parents to engage in regular, two-way, and meaningful communication involving student academic learning and school activities. Schools are also required to develop strategies to increase parental involvement (U.S. Department of Education, 2009). In line with the federal law, the following recommendations are suggested.

1. Schools identified with low participation rates in Chancery need to stress parent involvement activities, particularly campus events that parents are encouraged to attend. They should also impress the coding of participation in these activities in Chancery by school personnel. These events could include open house and parent-teacher organization meetings.
2. Schools need to identify successful plans and activities that can be replicated to raise the levels of parent involvement.

TITLE I, PART A PARENT INVOLVEMENT 2009–2010

INTRODUCTION

Program History

After assessing the educational opportunities of those children who were considered economically deprived, President Lyndon B. Johnson constructed legislation in 1965 that would give underprivileged students supplemental support with their educational needs. The Elementary and Secondary Education Act (ESEA) gave birth to Title I, Part A as we know it today. Today, as the largest federal block program supporting elementary and secondary education, the purpose of this program is to:

provide financial assistance...to local educational agencies serving areas with concentrations of children from low-income families; and to expand and improve their educational programs by various means...which contribute particularly to meeting the special educational needs of educationally deprived children (PL 89-10, Section 201).

In 1965, ESEA was put into law, which included Title I, and has had several reauthorizations. Initial changes attempted to close the gap of poverty, while recent changes have been made to create more rigorous standards of accountability across all states (Mizelle and Irvin, 2000). In 2001, ESEA was again reauthorized and renamed No Child Left Behind (NCLB). The reauthorization brought the most sweeping changes since the implementation of ESEA. According to the National School Board Association (2000), these changes were put into effect "...to increase the role of parents in program design, and to ensure that Title I funds were used to supplement (not replace) local funds." Included in those changes were detailed provisions that required every Title I school to set aside one percent of their per pupil allocation for parental involvement:

A local educational agency may receive funds under this part only if such agency implements programs, activities, and procedures for the involvement of parents in programs assisted under this part consistent with this section. Such programs, activities, and procedures shall be planned and implemented with meaningful consultation with parents of participating children. (PL 107-110, Section 1118 (a)(1).

In addition to the requirements for schools to serve parents, districts are required to formulate and assess their parental involvement policy within their Title I district plan (Department of External Funding, 2008c). The policy must state that parents have been given an opportunity to participate in their children's education through signed compacts, conferencing, education opportunities, family literacy, parent literacy, planning, and volunteering. The district parent involvement supervisor ensures the district remains in compliance with the provisions expressed in the law.

Program Description

The Title I, Part A program is designed to ensure that all children have a fair, equal, and significant opportunity to obtain a high-quality education and reach, at a minimum, proficiency on challenging state academic achievement standards and state academic assessments. The Title I, Part A program (Part A-Improving Basic Programs Operated By Local Educational Agencies) was authorized by the ESEA and reauthorized by the NCLB Act of 2001.

Under this act, provisions to engage parents in the education process were made. The program's goal is to increase the presence of parents involved by providing funding and opportunities for parents of Title I, Part A students on either a schoolwide or targeted assistance campus. These provisions stress shared accountability between schools and parents for high student achievement. They include: expanded public school choice, a broader range of supplemental educational services for eligible children in low-performing schools, local development of parental involvement plans with sufficient flexibility to address local needs, and building parents' capacity for using effective practices to improve their own children's academic achievement (U.S. Department of Education, 2004). The program affords parents the opportunity to be informed at all levels of implementation.

According to the Title I, Part A Parent Involvement Guide (Department of External Funding, 2009c), parents must be involved in the decisions associated with impacting their children's academic success. For the purpose of identifying how parents were involved, the district identified the following eight areas by which parent involvement would be classified: individual compact, schoolwide compact, conference, education/training, family literacy, parent literacy, planning, and volunteering. The 2009–2010 Title I coding procedures for Chancery provides a description of each of these types (Department of External Funding, 2009a).

The 2009–2010 Title I implementation guide identified the following definitions:

Individual Compact – A contract that lists the responsibilities of Title I Targeted Assisted School parents, staff and students for improved student achievement.

Schoolwide Compact – A contract that lists the responsibilities of Title I Schoolwide School parents, staff and students for improved student achievement.

Parent Conference – A one-on-one meeting between the parent and classroom teacher that may include others such as the assistant principal, counselor, or another stakeholder.

Parent Education – Classes or topics covering parenting skills and actions that the parent can use to assist their child(ren) to become successful mastering the state's challenging academic standards and assessments.

Family Literacy – Sustained classes and continuing education that help the parent (or other family member) and child(ren) to become literate in reading and computer skills.

Parent Literacy – Sustained classes and continuing education that help the parent (or other family member) become literate and child(ren) to become literate in reading, computer skills, and/or job skills (i.e. GED, ESL, and Computer Literacy Classes).

Planning – An opportunity for parents to meet and plan activities that will increase parental involvement at the local campus, as well as an opportunity for parents to have input about how the Title I, Part A funds are used at the local campus.

Parent Volunteer – Parents at the local campus involved in capacity building activities that help foster an environment conducive for learning.

In determining the level of responsibility shared between the school and the parent for the child's education, a compact is generated where all parties are asked to sign. This compact must: be developed jointly, outline the responsibilities of each stakeholder, describe the school's responsibility in guiding instruction and the parent's role in supporting the learning process, and detail the importance of communication between the parents and the school (Department of External Funding, 2009c).

Federal Criteria for Identifying Title I, Part A Campuses

Title I, Part A regulations require that one percent of the total school Title I allocation be set aside for parental involvement activities. Schools are required to provide parents with a written parental involvement policy, which must be included in the district's plans. Additionally, schools must collaborate with parents in an effort to build capacity while also integrating other state and federally funded educational programs, conducting annual evaluations, and designing new strategies that impact parents and students (Department of External Funding, 2009b).

Purpose of the Evaluation Report

The purpose this report was to assess the level of parental involvement coded in Chancery in relation to the feedback gathered on the 2009–2010 Parent Involvement Survey. The percentage of the responses received from the survey and the percentages of parental involvement recorded in Chancery were included for each campus. The household demographic data were noted where available. Finally, this report provided school office and district-level summations of student participation in Chancery and responses from the 2009–2010 survey.

1. What were the demographic characteristics of students whose parents were coded in Chancery and parents who responded to the Title I Parent Involvement Survey?
2. How did the parent involvement information in Chancery compare to parents' perceptions as expressed on the 2009–2010 Title I Parent Involvement Survey?

Methods

Data Collection

There were 270 Title I, Part A campuses in the Houston Independent School District (HISD) during 2009–2010. These campuses consisted of six early education centers, 171 elementary schools, 51 middle schools, one middle/high school, and 41 high schools. Of this number, 269 were designated as schoolwide campuses and one was designated as a targeted assisted campus (Appendix A).

Data were obtained using a variety of sources. Student demographics by ethnicity and Title I status were taken from 2009–2010 PEIMS Fall Collection (Resubmission). The PEIMS database is the statewide data collection and reporting system operated by the Texas Education Agency, which includes extensive information on students. It serves as the information database for many statewide reports on public education, such as the Academic Excellence Indicator System. For this report, PEIMS was used to identify those students who were coded a "6" or a "7" on campuses identified as schoolwide or targeted assisted, respectively. Parental involvement in the eight participation categories were obtained from the Chancery Student Information System. Parental demographics and perceptions were gathered from the 2009–2010 Parent Involvement Survey.

School staff tracked the participation of parental involvement on the campus through Chancery. Staff were asked to record parental involvement in the following eight areas where applicable: individual compact, schoolwide compact, conference, education, family literacy, parent literacy, planning, and volunteer (Appendix B). An end-of-year file was obtained from the Student Information Systems/Chancery Department to report the number of students whose parents were involved in these activities.

The Title I, Part A Parent Involvement Survey was created to obtain parents' perceptions of how schools were involving them in their children's education. Survey templates were sent to the schools and they were instructed to print and distribute them to all parents of Title I students to ensure all parents had the opportunity to provide their input. Parents were asked to return the completed surveys to their children's schools or to complete them online. District Title I staff gathered the surveys from the schools and responses were manually tabulated. Districtwide, 15,529 surveys were completed and returned by parents. Surveys were produced in three languages: English, Spanish, and Vietnamese (Appendix C).

Data Analysis

School Participation Demographics

School participation demographics were based on the Title I enrollment and the number of students whose parents were recorded in Chancery, by ethnicity. The percent of parent involvement was calculated by dividing the number of students' parents in an ethnicity group by the total number of Title I students in the group.

Survey Demographics

This section details the total number and percentage of respondents to the survey by demographic characteristics. Survey participation figures were based on participation responses to questions addressing the following characteristics: ethnicity, gender, English spoken in the home, educational level, and the number of children each respondent had attending an HISD school. Results were presented by cross-tabulating ethnicity by the remaining characteristics.

Parent Participation and Perception Comparisons

Results from the eight categories coded in Chancery were combined with relevant survey questions. The questions were grouped with the Chancery categories in collaboration with the Department of External Funding. These combinations of survey questions with the Chancery parent involvement categories provided additional insight from parents regarding the effectiveness of specific activities within each of the categories. Results were calculated by dividing the number of students coded in each parental involvement category by the number of Title I students enrolled.

Parents were asked to complete Likert scale items to score their level of agreement using the following categories: Strongly Agree, Agree, Neutral, Disagree, and Strongly Disagree. The percentages of parents selecting each category were calculated by dividing the number of parents selecting a category by the total responding to each item.

Two questions were included in each of the Parent Involvement Categories. They were: Question 10: "The school communicated with me often in a language that I could understand." And, Question 12: "The school provided opportunities for families from different backgrounds to participate in school activities." These two questions were included in each category because communication with parents and providing opportunities for them to participate can impact the extent to which parent involvement is supported in each category. Questions 10 and 12 on the Parental Involvement Survey impacted each of the seven parental involvement categories, and their responses were repeated.

Data Limitations

The number of surveys received from parents represented 8.1 percent of the Title I students enrolled during the 2009–2010 school year. As a result, findings may not represent all parents.

Results

What were the demographic characteristics of students whose parents were coded in Chancery and parents who responded to the Title I Parent Involvement Survey?

From the 270 Title I campuses, 191,560 Title I students were enrolled in HISD. The 5,113 Asian Title I students had the highest percentage of parental involvement participation from Chancery data among all ethnic groups (72.7 percent). Hispanic students represented the largest ethnic group enrolled (122,229) and had the third highest parent involvement participation rate at 62.2 percent. The lowest parent participation rate coded from Chancery was 53.1 percent for African American students. (See page 31 for districtwide survey results.)

For the 2009–2010 school year, the largest ethnic group responding to the Parent Involvement Survey was Hispanic (9,478) representing 61.1 percent of the 15,520 surveys returned. Seventy-six percent of all respondents were women. By gender, the category of Hispanic women was the highest percentage of persons responding (80.6 percent). African American respondents represented the highest percentage (86.4 percent) of households who spoke English, while Hispanic respondents had the highest percentage (68.7 percent) who indicated that English was not spoken at home. Among all survey respondents, 28.3 percent had three or more children.

How did the parent involvement information in Chancery compare to the parents' perceptions as expressed on the 2009–2010 Title I Parent Involvement Survey?

Overall, schools appear to be successfully communicating with parents in their home language and providing them with opportunities to participate in school activities. Districtwide, 86.8 percent of the survey participants responded that they “Strongly Agree” or “Agree” with Question 10 “The school communicated in a language that I could understand.” Similarly, although at a somewhat lower level, 79.2 percent “Strongly Agree” or “Agree” that families from different backgrounds had opportunities to participate in school activities (Question 12). (See pages 31–32 for districtwide survey results.)

Parent Compact

Districtwide, schoolwide compacts were established with 60.6 percent of the schoolwide parents and individual compacts were established with 0.1 percent of parents at targeted assisted schools. There was only one targeted assisted campus in HISD during 2009–2010 and it reported to the Elementary Schools Office. Schools reporting to the Elementary Schools Office had the highest percentage of students coded whose parents received schoolwide compacts (67.0 percent). Both the Middle and High Schools offices had lower percentage of parents coded as having schoolwide compacts in Chancery than the district rate (57.1 and 49.9 percent respectively).

Schools appeared to be diligent in establishing the compact between them and the students' parents. Districtwide, the percentage responding “Strongly Agree” or “Agree” to Questions 2: “The school has provided me a copy of the parent involvement policy” was 86.0 percent and Question 3: “The school provided me a copy of the parent/school compact” was 82.7 percent. When reviewing the survey feedback, those schools reporting to the Elementary Schools Office had a higher percentage than the district who responded “Strongly Agree” or “Agree” with Question 2 (88.1 percent) and Question 3 (84.9 percent). Over 75 percent of the schools reporting to the Middle and High Schools offices also reported “Strongly Agree” or “Agree”; however, their percentages were lower than the district.

Conferences

Just over 40 percent (40.2 percent) of Title I parents participated in parent conferences districtwide. The participation rate was highest for the group of schools reporting to the Elementary Schools Office (51.1 percent). This rate exceeded the districtwide participation rate recorded in Chancery.

Districtwide, 87.4 percent of survey respondents believed that schools provided opportunities for conferences. When reviewing perceptions by survey respondents, 90.2 percent with students in schools reporting to the Elementary Schools Office exceeded the district who responded “Strongly Agree” or “Agree” to Question 1: “The school has encouraged and provided opportunities for me to participate in school sponsored parent/teacher conferences, school curricula activities, and meetings.” Among schools reporting to the Middle and High Schools offices, 81.7 percent responded “Strongly Agree” or “Agree” with this question. The percentage of High School respondents who “Strongly Agree” or “Agree” (51.7 percent) was higher than Middle School respondents (43.7 percent).

Education

When reviewing the education category, 11.8 percent of students had parents coded as participating districtwide. Across school offices, those schools reporting to the Middle (16.6 percent) and Elementary (12.2 percent) Schools offices were above the districtwide participation rate. Parent education activities included explaining training materials to help parents assist students.

About 85 percent or 84.5 percent of parents, “Strongly Agree” or “Agree” to Question 5 “The school has described and explained the curriculum and the academic expectations for students to me.” Those schools reporting to the Elementary Schools Office exceeded the districtwide percentage rate of those survey respondents who responded, “Strongly Agree” or “Agree” (86.3 percent vs. 84.5 percent). No other school office group exceeded the districtwide percentage rate (83.2 percent) of those parents who responded “Strongly Agree” or “Agree” to Question 6: “The school has described and explained the assessments used to determine student academic achievement to me.”

Family Literacy

The districtwide participation rate for family literacy activities was 10.2 percent. When asked their perception of Question 8: “The school provided parent training that addresses my family needs,” 68.9 percent of the parents districtwide answered “Strongly Agree” or “Agree.” Those schools reporting to the Elementary Schools Office had a higher perception rate than the districtwide rate (71.4 percent). Districtwide, 20.5 percent of the respondents gave a neutral response and just over 10 percent of the respondents gave negative responses.

Parent Literacy

The major elements of Parent Literacy were the least coded categories on Chancery. Districtwide, only 7.0 percent of the students’ parents were coded as being involved in parent literacy activities. Only those schools reporting to the Middle Schools Office at (14.5 percent) exceeded the districtwide percent participating.

Survey results of the major elements of parent literacy: communication in an understandable language and opportunities for families with diverse backgrounds to participate widely were reported in the previous categories. An additional element of parent literacy is Question 14 on the survey: “The school did not have any barriers that prevented me from fully participating in parent involvement activities.” Eighty percent of survey respondents replied that these barriers did not exist.

Planning

An 8.7 percent rate of participation in planning activities was reported districtwide. The following questions were associated with this category on the survey and the districtwide percentages of respondents reporting “Strongly Agree” and “Agree” were: Question 4: “The school has provided opportunities for me to give input in the development of the parent involvement policy and the parent/school compact” (80.2 percent); Question 7: “The school encouraged me to give suggestions and share my experiences” (74.1 percent); and Question 11: “The school allowed me to give input on how parent involvement can be improved at my child(ren)’s campus(es)” (74.3 percent).

Volunteering

The last category tracked in Title I parent involvement on Chancery was volunteering with 10.6 percent of students, districtwide, whose parents had this item coded. Those schools reporting to the Elementary Schools Office had the highest participation rate (11.9 percent). Question 13 on the survey: “The school utilizes community resources (for example: corporate business partners, churches, and other organizations) to improve student learning,” was used to gather parent perceptions of volunteer opportunities. Of those parents responding “Strongly Agree” or “Agree,” the districtwide positive perception rate was 68.1 percent.

Discussion

Chancery results indicated approximately two-thirds of parents with children in Title I schools have established schoolwide or individual compacts; however, parent participation rate was 51.1 and lower in all other categories. Parent participation in parent literacy and planning was particularly low, with participation rates reported at 7.0 percent and 8.7 percent, respectively. The low levels in all of these areas and Parent Literacy and Planning in particular, indicate that schools must devote more attention to engaging their students' parents in these areas. Those low levels also indicate that schools consistently are not recording these activities in the Chancery system.

High percentages of parents “Strongly Agreed” or “Agreed” that schools were successful in involving parents in school activities and communication with them in their home language. The questions eliciting the highest levels of agreement districtwide were Question 1: “The school has encouraged and provided opportunities for me to participate in school sponsored parent/teacher conferences, school curricular activities, and meetings” (87.4 percent) and Question 10: “The school communicated with me often in a language that I could understand” (86.8 percent).

Among the school offices, those schools assigned to the Elementary Schools Office appeared to have the highest levels of parent involvement. They had the highest participation rates in Schoolwide Parent Compacts recorded in Chancery. They also had the highest percentage of respondents who “Strongly Agree” or “Agree” with Question 1 and Question 10. In addition, they also had higher “Agreement” percentages than the district in six of the seven Parent Involvement categories. Schools assigned to the Elementary Schools Office had the highest rate of parent conferences.

Recommendations

According to the Title I, Part A Parent Involvement components, schools must provide opportunities for parents to engage in regular, two-way, and meaningful communication involving student academic learning and school activities. Schools are also required to develop strategies to increase parental involvement (U.S. Department of Education, 2009). In line with the federal law, the following recommendations are suggested.

1. Schools identified with low participation rates in Chancery need to stress parent involvement activities, particularly campus events that parents are encouraged to attend. They should also impress the coding of participation in these activities in Chancery by school personnel. These events could include open house and parent-teacher organization meetings.
2. Schools need to identify successful plans and activities that can be replicated to raise the levels of parent involvement.
