Distant Learning

Success

- Many of the students who are participating are doing a really good job with their portfolios and work products.
- Our students/parents (and teachers) are becoming more technologically advanced.
- Teachers are being very caring and supportive.
- Reaching out to individual students is one effective way to get the participation rate up.

Challenges

- All students/parents are not participating.

- There are some instances of parents answering for their children during live meetings and even doing their assignments.
- How can we strategically choose programs and continue with the technology for next year, if there is a school closure?
- How can we have some consistency school-wide and in the district on which Apps we are using?

Support Needed

- PLCs will focus on virtual school trainings, mostly in the form of breakout sessions.
- We need more extensive, in-depth training next year for the technology that we are going to be implementing.
