Observations

- Average Daily Attendance percentage differences
  - Lowest HS ADA 88.3%
  - Highest HS ADA 96.7%
- Special Population differences
- This model created some increases as high as $2.8 million and decreases as high as $1.5 million.
- Many small schools do have non-zoned students attending, about 55% of their current zoned enrollment on average.
- The higher the percentage of out of zone students compared to zoned students the higher the chance a campus has insufficient funds.

RAAC Ad-hoc brainstorming meeting

Three broad areas have been surfaced to solve the financial issues of the district: Do nothing, find new money or close schools. The ad-hoc meeting surfaced because these three answers were neither acceptable or sufficient for several members of the RAAC committee. To that end, we spent time surfacing ideas around two main area:

1. Closure Alternatives-

- a. Community schools-
  - What resources might we be able to leverage, particularly for schools in need of a small school subsidy?
  - How might we identify and offer space to agencies that best serve the school mission in exchange for cost-sharing space in buildings working under capacity—starting with HISD themselves?
  - What concerns do school leaders have that impacts thinking and consideration of innovative alternatives involving community?
  - How do we replicate successful internal programs such as Durkee ES and Kashmere HS? And how do we measure success?
  - What might we learn from or how might we partner with successful community school programs such as Baker-Ripley?
- b. Internal/External Considerations
  - Might we utilize funding advantages designed for public-private partnerships? --day care
  - How might we redesign space from within to reach economies of scale for programs within the district? Should PD be in a building that doesn't hold kids or should wings within schools across geography be dedicated for this space and help cover building costs?

2. Innovative Funding

- How might we identify and offer space to agencies that best serve the school mission in exchange for cost-sharing space in buildings working under capacity—starting with HISD themselves?
- How might we repurpose excess property to create a continuous funding stream or provide HISD with a competitive advantage over other school districts?
  - i. Blended housing that provides both continuous market level returns as well as reduced cost housing to active HISD educators
  - ii. Commercial space at market rates
  - iii. Non-profit facilities with goal of providing cost-neutral upkeep of property

Closure priorities-the team discussed a hierarchy of priorities if the district were to resort to closures.

1. IR schools that place the district in danger of takeover

- 2. Small schools requiring subsidies
- 3. Population/program shift resulting in student decline

There was consensus that closure policy due to budget concerns must include notice of time with warning benchmarks and a framework for communities to engage families and access assistance with reversing student enrollment declines over time. Closures should not be done without significant lead time and awareness. The district should address the matter with a last-resort perspective and provide communities a real change to channel energy into positive turnaround efforts vs. strife due to lack of real transparency.

HISD must engage in a comprehensive marketing plan for individual schools geared towards family needs. Stop wasting time highlighting the part of the district everyone dislikes (4400) and highlight individual schools, programs, communities. Provide the supports necessary for students, educators and school leaders to tell their story. Utilize best practices from successful turnarounds like Frank Black MS.

There doesn't need to be an either/or narrative around small school subsidies. Small schools should be provided support for a limited amount of time and stair-stepped down over a three-year budget cycle. Step down plans should be coordinated with community school initiatives with the goal of identifying resources/supports/partners that will fill the need being addressed by the subsidy.

The district should consider consulting with other organizations who hold the mission of helping to build capacity from within such as the VISTA Program.
