

One Book, One School

Travis Elementary · April 20 – May 8, 2020

April 20, 2020

Dear Travis Families,

I hope this letter finds all of you safe and healthy. In a time of much uncertainty, there is one thing we can be sure of and that is the Travis community's love for a great story. Today marks the beginning of the sixth year of my favorite Travis tradition, One Book, One School (OBOS)! Whether we are able to be together each day or not, the tradition must go on. This year we will be reading Odd, Weird & Little by Patrick Jennings.

Odd, Weird & Little makes us examine how we treat others. Mr. Logwood's class gets a new student named Toulouse that is treated unkindly by some classmates that judge him not to be like everyone else. It is through the friendship Toulouse makes with classmate Woodrow that will put a smile on your face. Mr. Logwood's class teaches us to be upstanders, be true to who you are, and always remember that being kind is what makes our world a better place.

OBOS may look a little different this year, but the most important thing will remain the same. We will read together! Please follow the schedule below starting today. We will continue announcing a daily trivia question on morning announcements. Tune in each morning to hear the question for the previous night's reading. Please submit your answer to the Google form linked below by 2:30 p.m. the day of the announcement. The Google form may also be found on the library page of the 'Travis Learning Center' (<https://bit.ly/TravisLearningCenter>).

Two winners will be randomly selected from each grade level, each day and have their names announced on the next morning's announcements. We are also going to have an album on the Travis Web site for OBOS and would love for you to send a picture of your family reading this year's book. Please send photos to Mrs. Sanchez at msanch45@houstonisd.org.
